

Chinese buyers fuel boom

CHINESE property speculators are putting extra pressure on British house hunters, according to experts. Buyers from China have spent £120million in London in the past two months, according to estate agent Knight Frank, as they take advantage of the weak pound and low interest rates. But high prices at the top make it harder for those at the bottom of the ladder, the Housing Association warned. 'We simply don't have enough homes to go around,' a spokesman said.
